Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: .is fully anesthetized it is administered on a small gauze sponge clamped in forceps which are held several inches above the mouth. Vaseline should first be spread over the face, and especially around the lips and nose, to prevent the burning which might occur should any of the fluid drop. The same symptoms are to be watched for as in the case of ether. Death from chloroform is almost always sudden, from paralysis of the heart; the pupils become dilated, the face pale, and the pulse flickering. These symptoms usually come on with little or no warning. Ethyl bromid is often used as a substitute for chloroform, which it resembles in its action, except that it is more prompt. It is employed in minor operations and gynecologic examinations. About half a dram is poured on a folded towel, or chloroform-inhaler, and held close to the mouth and nose. The same amount is added at intervals until the patient is completely narcotized. The stage of excitement is short, and its elimination is rapid. It leaves a disagreeable odor of garlic on the breath, which may last several days; but, on the other hand, the patient recovers rapidly, and may be able in a very little while to resume work. Ethyl bromid is also used as a local anesthetic in the form of a spray. Schleift s anesthetic consists of one and a half ounces of chloroform, one-half ounce of petroleum ether, and six ounces of ordinary...
