What eare I whether my pockets are picked, or the proceeds of my labor taken from me? What matter whether my horse is stolen, or the value of him, ia my labor, be.taken from me? Do we talk of violating rights of masters, and depriving them of their property in their slaves; and will some one tell us if there be any thing in which a man has or can have so perfect a right of property as in his own limbs, bones, and sinews? Out upon such folly! The man who cannot see that involuntary domestic slavery, as it exists among us, is founded upon the principle ef taking by force that which is anothers, has simply no moral sense! There, fellow citizens, is abolition enough! But our object is more immediately to show that what we have said Is true, and what Mr. Breckenridge has said is utterly untrue, in every particular-The gentleman has again and again charged me with abusing himself and his church. This I deny. You were, many of you, present, and heard my speech as delivered here, and are my witnesses that I did not, in all 1 said, utter one discourteous or abusive word of Mr. Breckenridge or of his church. TSe gentleman has...
