WHAT is a Christian obliged to by his profession A. He is obliged inwardly to believe, and outwardly to confess the faith and law of Christ: With the heart we believe unto justification, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. Rom. x. 10. A Christian must believe in his heart all that Christ has taught, and his church professes, with a sincere and unfeigned faith: God must be served with sincerity and truth no deceit, dissimulation, or hypocrisy, must harbour therein; since all things, even our most secret thoughts, are open to him, and nothing is hidden but shall be revealed at the last day. A Christian must also profess the faith and law of Christ outwardly and openly, for Gods honour: thus, if called before kings and princes, enemies of your faith, and if demanded by them what religion you profess, yon must boldly confess yourself a Christin, a Catholic, and if by your confession of it you are to suffer, you must rather undergo death, as the apostles and holy martyrs did, than deny your faith: God must ever be obeyed before men, (Acts v. 29;) and the reward of this obedience will be, He who confesses me before men, him will I confess before my Father who is in heaven, (St. : Matt. x. 32. ;) whereas the reverse will follow disobedience; He who denieth me before men, him will I deny before my Father who is in heaven. - A Christian must profess his faith outwardly, for his own good, by often repeating his belief. -He must again profess it outwardly, for his neighbours...
