Not illustrated. 1890 Excerpt: . we believe, has been reduced in these degenerate days. The moss which clings to the sides of the well is the Jungermannia Asplenioides--vulgarly called St. Winefride s Hair. Some of the stones are coated with a vegetable growth called by Limueus Bums Ioltthut; and as this is ruddy, of course it is unquestionably St. Winefride s blood. The gothic chapel over the well is supposed to have been erected by the mother of Henry VII. t. L The Well, where public baths hare been constructed, belongs to the Duke of Westminster, but has been leased by him to the Corporation of Holywell for a thousand years at 1 per annum, and the Corporation let it to the Catholics. Its miraculous powers are still believed in by members of that communion, and if we may judge from the collection of crutches left behind, there must have been a period when something healed the sick who thronged the sacred spot. In 1871 Lord Denbigh, writing to the Tablet, thought it would be scarcely figurative here to say that the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, c., and ha added that through the miracles performed Protestants had been converted to the true faith. It has been feared at times, however, that the Well might disappear, for, according to general belief, the water flows through a subterranean channel called the Caleb Bell Vein, in Halkin Mountain, and a scheme for thoroughly draining the mountain might destroy this Wonder of...
